What I Know of Farming.

- BY HORACE OREELDY. I am not at all sentimental—much less spooney—regarding the destruction of trees. Descended from several generations of timber-cutters (for my paternal ancestors came to America in 1640) and myself engaged for three years in land-claring, I realize that trees exist for use rather than the correspond and I have no realized and I have no realiz aon. I forget that I am in the presence of the greatest of cotemporary writers of fiction, and clasp the hand of this charming, good old woman, who sparkles with all her early youth. Do not reproach me with this word 'old' which slips from my pen; she has not yet touched the snow of age, but I cannot, forget if I would, that she was born in 1804. * * * Like for ornament, and I have no more scruple than to cetting grass in a meadow. Util-ity is the reason and end of all vegetable growth—of a hickory's no less than a growth—of a hickory's no less time a corn-stalk's. I have always considered George Sand loves flowers, the whole veg-etable world, the beauty of nature. I have heard that when her literary life was first begun that life which revenged her flor the home she had lost, she was charm-ing to see, in her costume of student or page, her black hair rolling down her shoulders, climbing the Swiss hills, with "Woodman, spare that tree," just about the most mawkish bit of badly versified prose in our 'Inneange, and rever could guess how it should touch the sensibilities of any one. Understand, then, that I urge the planting of trees satisfy because I be-lieve it will pay, and the preservation, im-provement, and extension, of forests, for a mule carried on its back two little cra-dles. It was the young Consuelo, bathed in the harmonies of heaven and earth, and breathing the full breath of life. * * * * She writes me in answer to my ques-tions: I have nothing to tell you about myself that is very interesting. I am growing old, very calm and very happy in the midst of my lamily, with the experiprovement, and extension, of forests, for precisely that reason.

Yet I am not insensible to the beauty and grace lent by woods, and groves, and clumps or rows of trees, to the landscape they diversity. I feel the force of Emerson's avenuent, that "Beauty is its own son's avernent, thal "Beauty is its own excuse for being," and know that a homestead embowerd in, belted by, stately, graceful elms, maples, and evergreen, is really worth more, and will sell for, than tit were naked-field and meadow. I consider it one positive advantage (to balance many disadvantages) of our rocky, hilly, rugged Eastern country, that it will never in all probability be adequated of forests, as in all probabilty, be so denuded of forests as the rich, facile prairies and swales of the Great-Valley may be. Our winds are less piercing, our tornadoes less destructive, than those of the Great-West. I doubt whether there is another equal area of the carth's surface whereon so many kinds of valuable trees grow stantingeousty and whether there is another equal area of the carth's surface whereon so many kinds of valuable trees grow spontaneously and rapidly, defying eradication, as throughout New-England and on either slope of the Alleghenies, and this profusion of timber and foilage may well atone for, or may be fairly weighed against, many deficiencies and drawbacks. The Yankee, who has been accustomed to see trees spring up spontaneously wherever they were not kept down by ax, or plow, or seythe, and to cross running water every half miles of a Summer day's journey, may well to made homesick, by two thousand miles of naked, dusty, wind-swept plains, wherein he finds no water for fifty to a hundred miles, and 'knows it impossible to cut an an-helve, much more an acket-ne, in the course of a wearying journey. No Eastern farmer realized the blessedness of abundant and excellent wood and water until he had wandered far from his boy-hood's home.

No one may yot be able to fully explain the Plains," there is evidence that trees grew and four-ished where frome are then frequent and abiding where nome now exist. then frequent and abiding where none mow exist. A prominent citizen of Nevada, who explored southward from Austin to the Colorado, assured me that his party traveled for days in the bed of what had some been a considerable river, but in which it was evident that no water had flowed for years. And I have heard that since the Mormons have planted trees over considerable sections of Urah, rains in Summer are no longer rare, and Salt Luke evinces, by a constant though moderate increase of her volume of waters, that the equilibrium of rain-fall with exportation in the Great Basin has been fully restored to rather that the rain fall is now taking the lead.

I have a firm faith that all the great deserts of the Temperate and Torrid Zones will yet, be reclaimed by irrigation and tree-planting. The bill which Congress did not pass, nor really consider, whereby it was proposed, some years since, to give a section of the woodless Public Lands remote from settlement to every one who, in a separate township, would plant and what he was born, where she was born, where she will yet be for settlement to every one who, in a separate township, would plant and the sum of the proper in the form settlement to every one who, in a separate township, would plant and the control of the proper in the form settlement to every one who, in a separate township, would plant and the control of the proper in the form of the proper in the proper in the proper in the form of the proper in the form of the proper in the proper in a section of the woodless Public Lands remote from settlement to every one who, in a separate township, would plant and cherish a quarter section of choice forest trees, ought to have been passed—with modifications, perhaps, but preserving the central idea. Had ten thousand quarter sections, in so many different tewnships of the Plains, been thus planted to timber ten to twenty years ago, and protected from fire and devastation till name and the plains of these Plains for settlement would have been nearly or quite doubled. A capital mistake, it seems to me, is beave been nearly or quite doubled.

I entreat our farmers not to preserve every tree, good bad, or indifferent, that may happen to be growing upon their lands—but, outside of the limited districts wherein the primitive forest must still be out away in order that land may be obtained for cultivation to wint and way. tained for cultivation, to plant and rear at least two better trees for every one they may be impelled to cut down. How this may, in the average, be most judiciously done, I will try to indicate in my next.

Gen. Garfield, chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, made a report to-day on the gold panic. It gives a circumstantial account of its history, and comes to the following conclusion in view of all the testimony:

First, Prominent bankers and merchants who testified before the committee were unanimous in the opinion that there was no sufficient reason for the existance of the Gold Exchange and Gold Exchange Bank; that they were a source of meas-the Gold Exchange and Gold Exchange Bank; that they were a source of measureless evil and ought to be destroyed.

Second, That the gold conspiracy dealt a heavy blow at our credit abroad by shaking the faith of foreign capitalists in the stability of our trade and the honesty of our process, bundreds of foreign capitalists. satisticy of our trade and the honesty of our people; hundreds of firms engaged in legitimate business were wholly ruined or severely crippled, importers of foreign goods were for many days at the mercy of gamblers, and suffered heavy losses; in fact the entire country was injured; the foundations of business and morally were shaken, and numerous defaleations that shortly followed are clearly traceables.

shortly followed are clearly traceable to the mad spirit engendered by speculation. Third, The committee find that the wicked and cunningly devised attempts of conspirators to compromise the President of the United States or his family utterly failed. Corbin using the constraint which failed, Corbin using the opportunity which fatical corbin using an opportunity which his family relationship to the President afforded, and under that worst form of hypocracy which puts on the guise of repocracy which puts on the guise of re-ligion and patriotism, used all his arts to learn anmel him from the transition of the President which could be made profitable to him and his conspirators, but with these and all efforts of his gasoniates, the textinuous has not encuted a associates, the testimony has not chemed a word or an act of the President inconsis-tent with that patriotism and integrity which bofit the Chief Executive of the na-

In manufactures, we should find investment for capital, and an accession to the ranks of mechanical labor. This will induce and At Cost. maintain a state of prosperity, which shall be, to a considerable degree, free from deession or fluctuation. Indeed it will supply an element of permanence which few other things can. Still we are awar that it would minister to our local pride to be a county seat, and no other single interest would be benefitted so materially as the newspaper interest and a printing establishment. We have tried all the resources within our humble power for its realization. We have adopted all the uggestions of the friends of the measure. We have withheld nothing that was demanded of us. We have been at no small mins to ascertain the public sense of the cople of this county on the subject, to seeure co-operation, to disarm opposition n whatever quarter. No citizen of Titusville will turn with more regret from his cherished object of pursuit than ourselves, for, in a business point of view, prespectively we forfeit and -50° as much as -50° a, excepting the large owners of real estate. And now when we ask our people to join hands with Venango county, we do so with a firm conviction that we can neither beg, force, buy, steal, coax, or bribe by any sort of representation or combination and falsification, a new county, from both the Legislature of the State and the people of Crawford. tial steps in our progress. Already the cry goes up that we must construct an extensive system of sewerage in our main streets, as a measure of vital importance to the general health of the community. And how much longer can we postpone and forego the erection of a City Hall for the accommodation of our municipal bodies, our city officers, in the transaction of the public business, and for the proper custody and care of papers of official record and value?

Let our citizens consider, too, the eximpathies, all its social and political affinities, all its great and thriving business belong essentially to Venango. It is almost an accident, as it were, that it is not a portion of Venango county now, and the legislature, if it has any regard for the wants of a large community, will not hesitate to pass a bill placing Titusville where of right she belongs, in Venango county. Shall Titusville be denied the right of becoming in law what she is in fact—a part of Venango county? We hope not. We urge upon our members of the Legislature that they use every exertion toward this end, for we know of no reason why it should not be done. It would seen that should not be done. It would seem should not be done. It would seem that some people of Titusville object. Not that they have valid reasons, but because they expect political gain by keeping their own city and Crawford county in hot water all the time. It is to be hoped that for their own good such counsels will be overruled by the solid men of that place. Titusville belongs to Venango county by the laws of nature, and "what God has joined together let no man put asunder."

To do this, we need a liberal scale of municipal expenditure. Our taxes are already onerous, though not oppressive.

But we have, as yet, only taken the initial steps in our progress. Already the cry goes up that we must construct an extensive system of sewerage in our main. mentioned in Job, the Kings, the Prophets, and also the Gospels. David to express the bitterness of his grief, says that at the he ate ashes like bread. In the first centuries of Christianity, when public penance was imposed, ashes were cast upon the heads of those who were condemned, and they were obliged to stand without the gate of the church, amid the lamenta tions of the people within.

The ceremonies of Ash-Wednesday in Roman Catholic countries are a continuation of this primitive usage. The old line of the altar and fragments of consecrated wood are burned, and the ashes carefully collected. Before the celebration of the mass, the priests in mourning robes recites penitential psalms, and solemnly blesses the sacred ashes. Then all the faithful approach and prostrate themselves, while the priest marks a sign of the cross with the ashes upon the forehead of each of them, repeating each time the words of the anathema pronounced upon Adam for his sin "Remember man, thou art dust, and unto dust shalt thou return." The people, having thus listened to the sentence of death and leaving upon their brows the prophetic ashes, return to their places. It is the overture to forty days of penitential mourning, and follows immediately the wild excitements of the carnival. In the Anglican Church the maledictions pronounced against impenitent sinners are read on that day, at the end of each of

OPINION OF JUDGE GRIER.

OPINION OF JUDGE GRIER.

As I write with difficulty I can only state the conclusions to which my mind has come after a careful examination of this case.

The complainant has exhibited a patent daird 25th April, 1865. This is prima facis evidence of a good title, and puts on the respondents the barthen of proof that the patent is void or warthless. I need not repeat my remarks in the case of Goodycar vs. Day (2 Wall, C. C. Rep; 200), but now adopt them as afforting a rule of decision which applies clearly to the present case.

As the infringement of the patent is admetting, the only question will be as to the validity of combinant's patent of April 25, 1868.

"It was after speculation had been reduced to precise," and after repeated experiments, that the proposition of the patent of the people on the subprecision of the proposition of the

OPINION OF JUDGE GRIER

As I write with difficulty I can only state the conclusions to which my mind has come after a careful examination of Uses case.

The complianant has exhibited a pytent dated 15th April, 1850. This is prima face evidence of a good title, and puts on the respondents the burthing of the property of the property of the step point of a good title, and puts on the respondents the burthing of the property of the property of the property of the step point of the good of good title, and puts on the respondents the burthing of the property of the property of the good of the
